

Memorial tree planted in honor of Barry Holthaus

The death of Barry Holthaus was noted in the spring 2012 edition of the Wrangler, including his picture. His parents, Jim and Marcia, live in Bloomington. A group of their Bloomington friends wanted to provide a lasting memorial to Holthaus, and it was decided that a tree planted in the front yard of the chapter house would be most appropriate. Chapter members picked an appropriate spot for the serviceberry tree that will have blossoms in the spring and colorful leaves in the fall. About 40 friends gathered with Holthaus's parents at the chapter house for a dedication of the tree and reception in the living room on Saturday, May 12. A large poster displayed memories of Holthaus, including pictures of him at the chapter house. The weather was perfect.

Far left: Jim and Marcia Holthaus attended the tree dedication in honor of their son, Barry.

Left: Friends gathered for the dedication in the front yard of the chapter house.